En esta obra se elabora un balance de las teorías de la urbanización latinoamericana desarrolladas desde la década de los setenta. En forma paralela se evalúa la evolución de los procesos urbanos en América Latina y la manera como, ante nuevas realidades económicas y urbanas, se generan nuevos discursos explicativos del cambio en la ciudad; un énfasis especial se hace sobre la teoría del espacio de Milton Santos y los discursos de la economía de la información de Manuel Castells para finalizar con los discursos sobre globalización y ciudad mundial, destacando las transformaciones que ha experimentado la ciudad latinoamericana y una corta discusión metodológica a partir del desarrollo de la idea de una geopolítica urbana.
